THE STRENGTH AND REVIVAL OF THE Travel Industry

American writer Susan Sontag said, "I haven't been everywhere, but it's on my list," a sentiment that many passionate travelers can relate to as they plan their next vacations. The desire to explore is strong, and the human spirit is reawakened with each new adventure we experience.

Very simply put: We long to see the world, to feel the sun on our faces as we welcome a sunrise over the Caribbean, to stretch our arms and feel the breeze at the precipice of a Costa Rican mountain trek, and to savor that first sip of a perfectly brewed espresso in a bustling Parisian café.

Our relationships grow through adventures we share. Learning how to navigate foreign lands and challenging situations spark communication and problem-solving together. Time away with our family allows us to reconnect in new ways without the obstacles and distractions of our daily routines. Escaping work and other responsibilities permits us to discover destinations while delighting in new cuisine, culture, and landscapes without the pressures of assignments and deadlines. Traveling allows us to breathe and just BE with our loved ones.

[AS TRAVELERS, WE CRAVE THESE EXPERIENCES]

[THE DESIRE TO EXPLORE IS STRONG]

Travel agents truly understand your passion for travel, and we also understand your concerns. Each day, we concentrate our efforts on education, research, and communication so that we can empower our clients to make the best decisions for themselves. Our clients mean the world to us, and we want to instill confidence and comfort in you. Knowing that your dedicated travel advisor is working to ensure you are cared for not only through the best of times, but also in challenging times.

Strong relationships are at the core of the travel industry: our relationships with our suppliers, our relationships with our colleagues, and finally, our most special relationships—the ones we have with the families we plan vacations with.

Though our passports may be tucked away and our luggage may be gathering dust, we will travel again. When that day comes, we might feel strong emotions: excitement, hesitation, or fear.

Travel might look and feel different for some time, even for the most seasoned explorers. Maybe experiencing a nearby city as a tourist will be our first adventure. Maybe a tour of Italy has been on your bucket-list for quite some time, but for now, a tour of the American southwest will go on the calendar. Weekend getaways and road trips can help us ease into setting out from home once again.

Regardless of plans, big or small, vacation should be about joy. Travel advisors are standing by to help plan these joyful adventures when people feel ready to venture out together. Eventually, the travel dreams that have been building during this hiatus will become a reality through the trust and partnership of you and your travel advisor.

Pack Like a Pro

TO STAY HEALTHY ON THE ROAD

Travel gives us the opportunity to break out of our regular routine.

Unfortunately, some travel experiences — crossing time zones, eating different foods, or a change in climate — can sap your energy and lower your body's defenses.

Use this packing list to feel your best during and after travel.

REFILLABLE WATER BOTTLE

Hydration is key to maintaining your energy levels and staying healthy. Stay on top of your hydration by carrying an insulated, reusable water bottle. If you're flying, remember to keep the bottle empty and fill it after you've passed through any security checkpoints.

DISINFECTING WIPES

Minimize contact with germs by wiping down your seat area—armrests, tray tables, seatbelt buckles, air vents, and any other buttons or controls. In your hotel room or cruise cabin, disinfect surfaces such as door handles, light switches, bathroom fixtures, and the TV remote.

HAND SANITIZER

Washing your hands with soap and water is important, but a bottle of hand sanitizer is handy for those times when you can't get to a sink.

SUN PROTECTION

The sun is more intense in tropical locations, at higher altitudes, or when it's reflected off water, sand, or snow. Protect yourself with a broad-spectrum sunscreen, sunglasses, and a wide-brimmed hat.

VITAMINS AND SUPPLEMENTS

Taking extra Vitamin C, probiotics, and other supplements may help boost your immune system while traveling. Remember to ask your medical provider for recommendations and appropriate dosages.

FIRST AID

A small first aid kit comes in handy for treating a minor illness or injury. It should include antibiotic ointment, anti-itch cream, bandages, antacids, pain reliever, and a decongestant. Your doctor may also recommend medications to treat travelers' diarrhea or other common ailments.

PRESCRIPTION MEDICATIONS

Never put essential medications in your checked luggage. Be sure to carry enough of a supply to last a few extra days, in case of a travel delay. It's also a good idea to bring a copy of your prescriptions or be able to access them online in case you happen to lose your checked luggage or its arrival is delayed.

SLEEP AIDS

You can't always control how much light or sound enters your hotel room or cruise cabin. Create a more restful sleeping environment with items like an eye mask, ear plugs, essential oils, and chamomile tea bags. A white noise machine or phone app can also drown out noisy neighbors and help you catch some shut eye.

YOGA MAT

Long travel days and lugging heavy bags can lead to muscle tension. A lightweight yoga mat rolls up for easy packing and gives you a clean space to stretch. Remember to wipe down both sides with a disinfectant wipe before you roll it up and pack it away again.

What It's Like to Plan a Group Trip with a Travel Advisor

There is nothing better than spending time with the people we love, except seeing the world together. Planning a group trip can be a daunting task. Whether it is a family reunion or a gathering of friends, picking the right location and travel dates is a challenge. And that's just the beginning! Then you have to communicate with your fellow travelers and keep track of deadlines for payment. It is a lot to handle. That's why you need a travel agent! Together, you and your travel agent will craft a trip with very little stress and a whole lot of fun!

UNDERSTANDING YOUR GROUP

It all starts with your first meeting. Travel agents who specialize in group travel understand the demands for all group sizes and how to meet them. In the first consultation between you and your travel agent, you will discuss what needs to be in place for your group trip to be a success.

To do this, your agent will ask for important details about the group and your reasons for traveling. Knowing the size of the group, age range of any children, and travel dates are key to making sure your agent can help you find the right destination and accommodations. You will also want to share any additional information such as mobility issues, travel concerns, or restrictions that might affect members of your group. Knowing these details will help your agent research and make the best recommendations.

PLAN WITH CONFIDENCE

Once your agent has options for you, they'll walk you through them. The choices may seem overwhelming as you look at each resort, destination, or cruise line. What makes each resort unique? Which one has what your group is looking for? That's why you are working with a travel agent. They are there to explain the details and answer the questions you have. With their help, you will feel confident in your choice!

MORE FUN FOR EVERYONE

Your agent will help you get the word out to your guests with emails, flyers, or even a travel night. Travel nights can be small or large, in-person or virtual. During a travel night your agent will educate your guests and get them excited for the proposed trip. It also gives your guests a chance to confirm their spot with your agent.

Group travel can be a blast for all those involved. When you begin your group with a travel agent, you will benefit from the value and peace of mind that only comes when working with a trusted travel professional.

Girls Just Wanna Have Fun

3 KEYS TO A STRESS-FREE GIRLS GETAWAY

Some fun. That's all girls really want! Especially after weeks or months of quarantine, it feels vital to get time away from the kids, partners, and the endless responsibilities of life at home. You want to live your life right, and a girls' getaway is just what Cyndi Lauper ordered. Below are ways to ensure collaborative, drama-free planning so you and your favorite ladies can enjoy quality time together!

1. SET A SHARED GOAL

When you embark on vacation, you have a goal in mind. It could be letting loose and celebrating a certain milestone. It could be unplugging to enjoy a few days of peace and quiet. It could be sampling as much of the local food and drink as possible.

Before planning specifics, get all the gals on the same page and discuss what each person wants out of the trip. Ask "how much free time do you want to have versus planned activities?" Usually, you and your travel buddies will want a mix of fun, relaxation, and adventure. Sharing these goals will make planning easier because everyone will understand each other's priorities.

2. PLAN DEMOCRATICALLY

Discussion is helpful but eventually, it needs to lead to decisions. To make sure everyone's voice and opinions are heard clearly, use a survey tool, like SurveyMonkey, Doodle, a poll in a private Facebook group, or even a shared spreadsheet.

The party doesn't need to vote on every small decision, but for key factors like which travel dates work for them and which destinations they prefer, voting helps paint a clear picture of your vacation.

3. DIVVY UP THE TO-DO LIST

When the working day is done, some girls just want to de-stress with more planning.

Having one person take the reins on everything might seem like a dream for everyone else, but it could lead to misunderstandings or bitterness later on. There may be others in the group who want to contribute but don't want to step on any toes. Consider what each traveler is passionate about and ask them to take care of a travel task related to that passion. It could be creating happy hour playlists for the music maven, or researching restaurants, if you have a foodie in your group.

Bringing the ladies together is a special occasion, and in the wake of COVID-19, it will require even more planning and consideration. Reach out to your local travel advisor to better understand when and where you can connect on your next girls' getaway.

Your Fun Advisor
IS HERE FOR YOU:

3 WAYS THAT TRAVEL ADVISORS HELP YOU Travel Smarter

Think about the services you rely on in life: your doctor, your accountant, your hairstylist or barber. Trust is the key to your connection with these professionals. Your health, your financials, and your hair shouldn't be left to just anyone.

The same is true for your vacation, whether it be a road trip to California Wine Country or a Caribbean cruise. More than ever, your travel advisor will be your guide to traveling smarter through the post-pandemic world.

THEY WORK BEHIND THE SCENES for you.

A travel professional is not earning their commission by hopping on to Travelocity and booking your trip. Much like cutting your own hair, this is something you could do, but what would the result be?

Your travel agent researches the top resorts for your budget. They contact hotels and cruise line representatives to figure out what type of special diets can be accommodated. They coordinate transfers from the airport, so that you aren't left wondering when and how you are going to make it to your final destination. And they communicate it all to you, so your expectations for your getaway are set well before you take off.

THEY HELP YOU GET your time back.

What does it look like to plan travel in a post-COVID world? You'll need to research when specific destinations are opening to travelers or when specific cruise ships are sailing. Then you'll spend time figuring out policies and procedures you'll need to follow based on the regulations set forth by governments and policies by travel companies. That's before you even start planning the details like where to eat and what landmarks you want to see. Or you could make a call or send an email to your travel agent, and let them advise you on the best course of action with the available information. Think of what else you could do with those hours!

THEY SAVE YOU FROM EYE STRAIN – AND FROM MISSING important details.

This year has seen more travel disruptions than ever before, and with it, an unimaginable number of trip cancellations and postponements. No one wants that to happen, but your travel agent will be able to advocate for you should these stressful situations arise.

Much of the advocating comes from translating the policies and procedures of travel companies and governing bodies for your specific situation. The fine print associated with airline tickets, cruise bookings, and hotel reservations is only going to increase in the wake of the pandemic. Even if you're an informed and experienced traveler, it will take a very keen eye and an understanding of all of the industry's changes to navigate the "new normal" for traveling.

When you do travel again, let your travel advisor light your way to ensure you have a full and clear view of what's ahead.

Romance LUXURY

Living in the lap of luxury

IS SOMETHING MOST PEOPLE DREAM ABOUT EXPERIENCING.

If your finances don't allow for you to bask in the finer things every day, traveling can be a chance for you and your special someone to treat yourselves. Extraordinary romantic getaways aren't just about champagne upon arrival and a mint on your pillow. Luxury is the over-the-top experiences, attention to every detail, and fulfilled requests that please every one of your senses.

BUCKET LIST Destinations

Where do you go when you've already been to the world's best beaches? Out-of-the-box destinations have the best photo ops and even better memories. From an African safari to your own private villa, going somewhere few of your friends have traveled can be the perfect next chapter to your love story. Your travel advisor can share insider knowledge of private excursions and hidden-gem restaurants to help you avoid being surrounded by tourists.

NEXT-LEVEL Spa Days

One of the most popular ways for couples to relax and unwind is a visit to the spa. Pampering yourselves with a couple's massage is a great choice, but why not elevate your experience? Nothing is more serene than feeling the ocean breeze and hearing the waves as you enjoy a beachfront massage. Taking a pause from your time together with separate appointments for hair, nail, and skin treatments after your massage will help to build the anticipation for a romantic dinner date.

SAY YES TO Special Requests

Cookie-cutter is not in the luxury vocabulary. Have a drink of choice? Your travel advisor can ensure the resort or destination you choose is equipped and ready to serve you. Do you prefer one type of quality bedding over another? Every attention to detail can be arranged ahead of time to ensure the level of service exceeds your expectations.

NO OCCASION Necessary

Honeymoons and anniversaries are the perfect reasons to enjoy extra time alone. Destination weddings present even more opportunities to make you feel like royalty on the most special day of your lives. Whether you're celebrating a milestone moment or just enjoying your time together, your travel advisor can arrange for extra amenities, personalized decor, and fully stocked private transfers by land, air, or sea.

One of the most exciting parts of taking a trip is the chance to try the local flavors. Food allows us to connect with a culture and explore with more of our senses. Making international dishes at home is a great way to relive travel memories and find inspiration for your next trip.

We've rounded up three recipes from around the world to add a little international flair to your kitchen adventures.

Croque Monsieur

Simple, yet mouth-watering, the croque monsieur is a straightforward dish that makes for a decadent lunch or dinner. Sticking true to the French affinity for cheese, butter, and bread this open-faced sandwich is easy to make at home.

Makes 8 open-faced sandwiches or 4 double-deckers (pictured).

INGREDIENTS

- 2 Tbsp butter
- 3 Tbsp all-purpose flour
- 2 c milk
- 1 tsp salt
- 1/2 tsp black pepper
- 1/2 tsp garlic powder
- 12 oz Gruyere, grated (5 cups)
- 1/2 c freshly grated Parmesan
- 8 slices of bread
- 8 oz ham, sliced but not paper thin

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Preheat the oven to 400° F.
2. In a saucepan, melt the butter. Add the flour and stir.
3. Slowly pour the milk into the butter and flour mixture and cook, whisking constantly, until the sauce is thickened. Once it is thickened, add salt, pepper, garlic powder, 1/2 cup grated Gruyere, and the Parmesan. Remove from heat and set aside.
4. Toast the bread on baking sheets in the oven. Remember to flip the bread to toast on both sides.
5. Once toasted, top each slice of bread with a slice of ham and cheese sauce. Sprinkle the remaining cheese (4 1/2 cups Gruyere) on top.
6. Bake sandwiches for 5 minutes or until cheese has melted.

Hawaiian Haupia

This traditional Hawaiian treat is popular in cakes, puddings, and pies, but the original Haupia is a dessert all on its own. Traditionally served in small, Jello-like squares, it's a unique and authentic dish that is worth a try, whether it's in your own kitchen or in the land of Aloha.

Makes 16 2" square servings.

INGREDIENTS

- 1 can full fat coconut milk (about 14 oz)
- 5 Tbsp cornstarch (4 for less firm texture)
- 5 Tbsp granulated sugar
- 3/4 c water

Teaching Kids About the World Through Travel

...WHILE AT HOME

Encouraging children to become citizens of the world through an understanding and appreciation of other countries and cultures is one of the greatest gifts families can bestow upon their little ones. While firsthand experience is the most rewarding way to immerse ourselves, when travel is not possible, you can still create interesting learning experiences at home.

Bring different countries and new cultures into your home with these simple ideas and resources to prepare for your next family adventure!

THE DESTINATION: Mexico

Approximately 2,400 years ago, the Maya Indians settled in the Yucatan Peninsula. Their amazing talent for building is shown through the hundreds of beautiful cities and roads they created throughout the region. No one knows why the Maya disappeared, but they have left behind incredible ruins worthy of a visit when traveling to Cancun and Riviera Maya.

BRING THE EXPERIENCE HOME

- Explore Chichen Itza with National Geographic Kids.
- Learn about masks of the Maya and make a few of your own. Younger children might enjoy coloring a mask using this template.

THE DESTINATION: Ireland

While Ireland is known for its castles, pubs, and enchanting music, the lush and captivating Emerald Isle is also the birthplace of limericks. Limericks are a fun way to introduce children to rhymes and poetry while celebrating Ireland.

BRING THE EXPERIENCE HOME

- Read kid-friendly limericks together.
- Try to write your own and have an Irish-style family poetry slam!

THE DESTINATION: Germany

Food is the perfect gateway to another destination, and introducing kids of all ages to simple recipes makes for fun quality time. Famously delicious, German pretzels are thick and soft in the middle with a thin and crunchy crust.

BRING THE EXPERIENCE HOME

➤ Try this recipe to make a tasty traditional German snack together. Enjoy upbeat German folk music while you shape and enjoy your pretzels.

THE DESTINATION: England

Originating among the aristocrats in the 1840s, afternoon tea was served to stave off hunger and thirst in the long afternoon hours until dinner was served at 7:30 pm or later. It is a tradition still enjoyed today. An afternoon tea menu includes dainty finger sandwiches, scones with clotted cream and preserves, and assorted cakes and pastries.

BRING THE EXPERIENCE HOME

- Introduce your children to afternoon tea on a Saturday afternoon.
- Dress up, brush up on your best manners, use the fine china, and perhaps spark a new family tradition.

THE DESTINATION: Italy

Italy is among the top foodie hot spots. To prepare for a visit to Italy with the children, why not plan an amazing themed dinner?

BRING THE EXPERIENCE HOME

- Begin with gathering the family in the kitchen to prepare a delicious meal, such as a steaming pot of Pasta e Fagioli served with fresh baked bread.
- After dinner, settle in with a stack of children's books to take a literary journey to the magical country.
